PhD student

The role of a PhD student is not like any other role in society. Usually, the situation of an individual PhD student is unique, with its mixture of employment conditions, supervision, funding, individual study plan and various requirements regarding teaching duties.

PhD students are often put under great pressure from a number of directions, and our ombudsmen know what you can do, regardless of whether it is problems concerning your supervision or there are issues with your working conditions or working environment.

We have long and broad experience of helping PhD students. Our advice and support services can help you with all your questions and concerns about rights and obligations. We provide access to seminars and study visits, as well as career counselling whether you choose a career in academia or business at the end of your doctoral studies. In addition, our income insurance provides a secure platform for your future choices and opportunities.
